

Subject: TAKINGS

No power on earth has a right to take our property without our consent-John Jay (1st chief justice of the US Supreme Court)

Under the 5th amendment no one can be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law & just compensation

& that includes ones business or company which are private property so why then are such business owners across USA letting government seize & take control with nary a whimper of opposition or resistance. I would not stand for or submit to it nor should any of US now. The 8th & 10th commandments apply to government & it is not exempt from thou shall not steal or covet your neighbors goods(property) including the fruits of our labors which we are being denied on frivolous grounds.

Its called a regulatory taking in legal jargon & amounts to theft morally folks. All business owners great & small should sue the public officials responsible officially & personally for looting & plundering US as Chuck Baldwin recommends below.

To timidly allow government to get away with taking away our divine duty & right to make a living is unacceptable & so unamerican.to say the least. & I have no sympathy for those letting government pull the rug out from under your LIFElivelihoods .Peasants & serfs do so not free men or patriots. Judge Napolitano is on record declaring that these executive orders wont hold up in a court challenge so take him up on that & sue to prove him wrong. I dare you all.

What we the people do or fail to in the coming weeks will affect the generations to come for good or ill so let US remember

if we suffer tamely such lawless attacks on our liberty we encourage it & involve others (posterity)in our doom- Sam Adams

Here is what US Supreme Court says on the RIGHT to work. Butchers' Union Slaughterhouse Co. v. Crescent City Live-Stock Landing Co., 111 U.S. 746, 756-57 (1884):

“As in our intercourse with our fellow-men certain principles of morality are assumed to exist, without which society would be impossible, so certain inherent rights lie at the foundation of all action, and upon a recognition of them alone can free institutions be maintained. These inherent rights have never been more happily expressed than in the declaration of independence, that new evangel of liberty to the people: ‘We hold these truths to be self-evident’ – that is, so plain that their truth is recognized upon their mere statement – ‘that all men are endowed’ – not by edicts of emperors, or decrees of parliament, or acts of congress, but ‘by their Creator with certain inalienable rights.’ – that is, rights which cannot be bartered away, or given away, or taken away, except in punishment of crime – ‘and that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and to secure these’ – not grant them, but secure them – ‘governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.’ Among these inalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document, is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant the right to pursue any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as to give to them their highest enjoyment. The common business and callings of life, the ordinary trades and pursuits, which are innocuous in themselves, and have been followed in all communities from time immemorial, must therefore be free in this country to all alike upon the same conditions. The right to pursue them, without let or hinderance, except that which is applied to all persons of the same age, sex, and condition, is a distinguishing privilege of citizens of the United States, and an essential element of that freedom which they claim as their birthright. It has been well said that 'the property which every man has in his own labor, as it is the original foundation of all other property, so it is the most sacred and inviolable. The patrimony of the poor man lies in the strength and dexterity of his own hands, and to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper, without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property. It is a manifest encroachment upon the just liberty both of the workman and of those who might be disposed to employ him. As it hinders the one from working at what he thinks proper, so it hinders the others from employing whom they think proper.'

The courts have barely weighed in on these executive orders but while law may take naps during a pandemic they wont sleep through one stated the Kentucky Appeals court in a ruling over the weekend there against KY governor on religious freedom.

There are few nonessential businesses but plenty of nonessential politicians. The exercise of rights is only offensive to 2 types of people slaves & tyrants so which are YOU?

* <https://chuckbaldwinlive.com/Articles/tabid/109/ID/4006/NEVER-AGAIN.aspx>

Randy in Florida

I own my business.
The government doesn't own my business.
I have a right to provide for my family.
It is not the government's responsibility to take care of me or my family.
Therefore ~ MY BUSINESS IS OPEN